What the critics said about

Voglio un mondo rosa shocking* and Un amore rosa shocking:

'A novel dedicated to all those women who want to survive while reconciling work and private life, husbands and lovers, passions and positions.'

La Repubblica

'From the net to the bookshop: a hit: twenty thousand copies sold in two weeks.'

Corriere della Sera

'Shares in pink are bankrupting the bookshops'

Oggi

'It's a choice, a philosophy, a struggle, a desire. It's the novel-manifesto by Rossella Canevari and Virginia Fiume.'

Il Messaggero

'A fine piece of Italian fiction in the manner of American chick-lit.'

L'Unione Sarda

'Voglio un mondo rosa shocking is already a social phenomenon.'

l'Opinione

Bianca is a young woman who seems to be fulfilled. She lives with her boyfriend Edoardo, her former analyst, she works in the contemporary art department of an auction house and at last has a civilized relationship with her father and his partner, after years of friction. Bianca's life, in short, seems a nice one, with the prospect of a future crowned with professional success and the building of a family with the man she thinks she loves. Unfortunately it doesn't take much to bring the happiness she has built crashing down around her: something that for anyone else would be a chance of getting ahead in her career causes her anguish. Memories of the night that indelibly scarred her life twenty years ago return to torment her. Before she realizes it, Bianca falls back into a spiral of panic attacks, the pathology that made her adolescence a nightmare. This time, however, in trying to come to terms, once and for all, with the fears and ghosts of her past, she discovers truths and secrets that she had previously repressed. Struggling with herself, Bianca finally discovers that she is stronger and braver than she had ever imagined.

Since taking a degree in modern literature, Rossella Canevari has travelled all over the world and changed many jobs. She is a freelance journalist and a writer for television. She has published with Newton Compton the bestseller Voglio un mondo rosa shocking, which she co-wrote with Virginia Fiume, and Un amore rosa shocking.

She divides her time between Milan and Barcelona. Her internet address is www.rossellacanevari.com

The moving, romantic story of a girl confronted by her fears. For there are times when even discovering yourself
can be painful.
